Shelf
Oddity

Ever heard of airplanes that suffer identity problems? The 71-0291 fits this description quite well. TF-15A, F-15B, F-15E... Second prototype of double-seater, first flight in Oct. 1973, used for testing FAST-pack (FAST for Fuel And Sensor Tactical) conformal fuel tanks and chin pod. Touring the world to aid sales in Air Superiority Blue and bicentennial color scheme. Became a demonstrator of the Strike Eagle in 1980. This really sounds like a family problem, as its 71-0290 brother went even further with F-15STOL/MTD, NF-15B (NASA 837), ACTIVE, LANCETS, IFCS, SBRD/ECANS, HISTEC...

Depicted here is the second two seater Eagle in its earliest - TF-15A - guise. Worth noted is that this machine carries over another feature of early F-15s - the turkey feathers adorning the nozzles of P&W F100s (our photoetched detail set SO21446 takes care of that particular detail).

What did I say about the personality problems of the 71-0291? Toss in nationality problems for a good measure.
This is how MDD TF-15 appeared at 1973 Le Bourget - acting as a support of an effort to sell the Eagle to international customers - in this case - to the French.
